Strategy The Logic Of War

Strategy is made of such seemingly self-contradictory propositions, Edward Luttwak shows—they exemplify the paradoxical logic that pervades the entire realm of conflict. In this widely acclaimed work, now revised and expanded, Luttwak unveils the peculiar logic of strategy level by level, from grand strategy down to combat tactics.

Because war is the only way to lead to peace. Strategy is governed by the paradoxical logic where everything turns into its opposite. War brings peace by literally burning, destroying the resources needed to make war to some extent; much more importantly, by destroying the hopes, the ambitions, the expectations that drive war.

The Paradoxes of War - Reason.com

Deterrence isn't what it used to be. In the second half of the twentieth century, it was the backbone of U.S. national security. Its purpose, logic, and effectiveness were well understood. It was the essential military strategy behind containing the Soviet Union and a crucial ingredient in winning the Cold War without fighting World War III.

The Lost Logic of Deterrence | Foreign Affairs

But the 'No First Shot' strategy of China is hardly new; it has been successfully followed by China for decades even calling China's aggression of India in 1962 as a 'defensive counter attack'. Similar was the case in the Nathu La incident in 1967, eight month border war with Soviet Russia in 1969 and invasion of Vietnam in 1979.
